FIRE MARSHAL'S OFFICE IS BUSY

NO DEFINITE REPORT ON MONDAY'S FIRE MADE AS YET.

HAS A DEPUTY HERE STILL

J. M. Sexton of Madison Spends Day Investigating Clues Which May Lead To Finding Cause Of Blaze.

Fire Marshal T. M. Purtell is not yet satisfied with his investigation of the cause of the fire which destroyed the A. L. Fisher's warehouse and contents on Monday night last. Aside from his own investigation made on Tuesday and Wednesday, J. M. Sexton, one of the deputies in his office has been making a quiet investigation which with Purtell's report will lead either to a further investigation or dropping the matter entirely.

This morning the following dispatch was received by the Gazette from its Madison correspondent relative to the matter giving Mr. Purtell's views on

IS THE LAW PASSED NOT A VALID ONE?

County Treasurer Church Pays State Fines Collected from Fish and Game Prosecutions Under Protest.

Evidently there is a hitch in the laws of 1909 relative to the state and county's share of the monies paid into the county treasury for fines from prosecutions relative to infringement on the fish and game laws. At any rate Attorney General Gilbert thought so and in an opinion forwarded to the county treasurer states the law passed by the 1909 legislature is invalid and the payments should be made under the former statute which called for two per cent being retained by the county. There was about sixteen dollars in this part of the fines in the treasury that was remitted.

All the monies derived from fines and penalties which were due to the state, were sent to the state treasurer Wednesday. The total amount of these was $3,211.44 and the balance due to the state for the quarter amounted to $777.49. The sum due the state from the suit tax was $164. In the matter of remitting a per cent

ELECTED OFFICERS OF WAGON COMPANY

Edgerton Concern, Lately Started, is in Prosperous Condition.

Edgerton, Jan. 12.—At the first annual meeting of the Edgerton Wagon company, held on the evening of the 10th inst., at the Carlton hotel, over fifty of the stockholders were present. The report of the directors was a lengthy one, covering the arduous duties of securing a site down to the getting of the plant into active operation. The report also urged the selling of at least $10,000 more of stock to provide a more efficient working capital. The consolidation of the New Strawn Vehicle company, acquired but a few weeks ago, is endorsed as a most valuable acquisition to the local institution.

Three directors were elected for three years—L. C. Willson and L. M. Ellington to succeed themselves, and W. W. Huxtable, the new manager, in place of W. H. Wentworth. The meeting was harmonious throughout and addresses were made by W. W. Huxtable, L. E. Gettle, L. C. Willson, Andrew Jensen, Nels Halverson, L. C. Willson and Rev. J. E. Harlin. At the close of the meeting a large amount of stock was sold.

Seriously Ill.
Rev. T. J. Van Horn, pastor of the S. D. B. church at Albion, has been seriously ill with pneumonia. For some days his condition was considered most serious and relatives from Ashaway, R. I., were called here. At present he is resting more easy.

New Bank Nearly Finished.
A big force of mechanics are busily at work putting on the finishing touches on the new First National bank structure on Front street. The plastering of the interior is also finished and soon the building will be ready for occupancy.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. met this afternoon in the woman's room of the public library.

Manager W. W. Huxtable of the Edgerton Wagon company, accompanied by his wife, have arrived from Dodgeville. For the present they have taken quarters at the Carlton hotel.

RUINS OF THE A. L. FISHER WAREHOUSE, BURNED ON MONDAY NIGHT LAST. CROSS MARK (X) WHERE WATCHMAN L. P. ANDERSON WAS ASLEEP WHEN FIRE BROKE OUT AND HE WAS AWAKENED BY NEIGHBORS.

the subject more clearly that he would state when here the first part of the week. Evidently from this the matter has not been dropped and Sexton's report is awaited before any definite steps will be taken.

Madison, Jan. 13.—State Fire Marshal T. M. Purtell said this morning: "We have not received a report of the investigation of the Janesville tobacco warehouse fire Monday night and representatives of the department are still investigating. The fire had some suspicious circumstances amply sufficient to warrant the most thorough investigation. The warehouse contained large quantities of tobacco. The fire appears to have started on the top floor, some seventy feet distant from the nearest fire and we are satisfied that the fire was not started by any overhotted stove, or defective flue or the other usual causes of a legitimate accidental fire. Until we have completed the investigation we will be unable to make any arrests, if in fact any arrests at all result, but there is no use concealing the fact this fire looks bad."

District Attorney Danwiddie stated this afternoon that he had not talked with either Mr. Purtell or any of his deputies regarding the matter and that if any prosecution was planned it would have to be made through his office.

DOG FIGHT FRIGHTENS PICTURE SHOW PATRONS

Began Their "Scrap" Just At the Crucial Moment in the Show.

Ordinarily a dog fight is of but passing thought but the one which took place in a local theatre last evening caused a stir which was more than interesting, and nearly led to a stampede. The attention of the audience was held by the exciting scene depicted on the screen. The villain, in the moving picture drama, was steadily creeping up behind the hero in place some back-out drops in his light. The plot was adding to the atmosphere of the scene with creepy music, when suddenly a small fox terrier and another canine, lying under the seats took it into their heads to pull off a show of their own. Both dogs started a terrible racket just at the crucial moment. The audience was brought to its feet by the noise, some of the more timid ones running for the back of the theatre. The fighting beasts however were soon quelled and the audience again dropped into wrapped attention to see the villain thwarted.

EXCELLENT GAME TOMORROW NIGHT

Central Y. M. C. A. Cardinals Are Scheduled To Meet Lakota Cardinals At Rink Tomorrow.

Manager Langdon announces that the Central Y. M. C. A. Cardinals of Chicago, have been secured to meet the Lakota Cardinals in a fast basket ball game at the rink tomorrow evening. The Chicago Cardinals were formerly known as the Chicago Cubs and have an enviable record behind them. In their game with the Cardinals here last year they were defeated only by a narrow margin and the local players are preparing for a hard tussle tomorrow night. The record of progress of the Janesville team is well known and their opponents will have a strenuous time in defeating them.

Byrne Defeated.
About fifty fans accompanied Byrne, the local roller skater, to Rockford last evening to witness a mile race between him and Alfred Getts of the Forest City. Byrne experienced the misfortune of slipping and falling in the third lap giving Getts a long lead. Byrne later caught up to him but slipping again, he lost the race. A special car was chartered to carry the aggregation to Rockford.

THE SUFFRAGETTE.

Miss Christabel Pankhurst, who lately arrived in New York to touch American women the art of gaining the right of suffrage by violence, is one of the disturbers who figured conspicuously in the London riots of November, as will be seen by the following account, published at the time.

"London, Nov. 22.—Prime Minister Asquith was assaulted by militant suffragettes in the precincts of the House of Commons today and was saved from rough handling only by the prompt arrival of a strong body of police.

"One of the women hit the Premier a smart blow and when the police carried Mr. Asquith off in a taxicab, the suffragettes attempted to storm the Premier's residence, and later attacked Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, as he was strolling through St. James park to the Athenaeum club. They swooped down upon the aged statesman, knocking him over his eyes and kicking him about the legs. When help came and the women were driven off, Mr. Birrell limped to his motor car, on the arms of policemen.

"The rioting continued into the evening, when squads of women stoned the residences of Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary; Winston Spencer Churchill, the Home Secretary; and Lewis Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies. Sir Edward Grey's house bore the brunt of the assault.

"The attack on Mr. Asquith followed his announcement in the House that if he was still in power at the next session of Parliament, the Government would give facilities for the consideration of a woman's franchise bill so framed as to admit of free amendment.

"This declaration, instead of placating the suffragettes, as it was intended to do, served only to inflame them with the idea that Mr. Asquith was playing with them. At a meeting at Haxton Hall, Miss Christabel Pankhurst characterized the Minister's statement as wholly unsatisfactory and 'nothing more nor less than an insult to the cause.' The women, she shouted, considered the Premier's attitude a declaration of war, and they would answer the challenge immediately.

"No sooner said than done. With a rush the women emptied the hall, and, several hundred strong, started for Downing street. With unexpected good fortune they encountered the Prime Minister on his way from the House. Without any preliminary Miss Henrietta Williams struck the Government leader, at the same time crying out:

"You tax women as heavily as men, yet women are not represented in Parliament."

"The Prime Minister was hustled into a taxicab. As the cab started off with a bound, Miss Williams made another attempt to reach its occupant, and in doing so put her militant fist through the glass of the cab window. She was pulled away, still crying, 'Traitor!' and 'Coward!'"

"The Twine Binder Plant. One of the first bills introduced at Madison calls for an appropriation of $400,000 to complete and equip the twine binder plant at the Waupun prison.

This plant was started in 1907 with an appropriation of $125,000, and in 1909 an effort was made to secure $470,000 more. This resulted in bitter discussion and failure. The present effort is likely to succeed, because it is a so-called progressive movement.

In order that intelligent action might be taken at the present session of the legislature, the Bureau of Labor took the matter up, two years ago, and after a careful and thorough investigation of the industry, in the eight states which have adopted it, made their report, which was published in pamphlet form.

This report is non-partisan and free from personal bias, but it is worth a careful analysis by every member of the legislature, as well as by every taxpayer. Any man who studies it, with unprejudiced mind, will be compelled to admit that the investment of half a million dollars, or more, in the manufacture of binding twine, is of doubtful utility.

The report is too long to be reproduced or read in a daily paper. Copies of it can doubtless be secured at the office of the Labor Commission in Madison.

There are only two arguments used by men who favor the scheme; one, the employment of convict labor, in channels which will not interfere with other industries; the other, the saving of money to Wisconsin farmers.

These arguments lose weight when compared to the many objections suggested in the report referred to. The industry only furnishes employment to a limited number of convicts, and this for only a few months during the year. The product is in demand for thirty days, during the harvest season, and then must be sold direct to consumer, as there is no inducement for the dealer to handle it. The difficulty in securing good raw material, the length of time it must be carried, the unsanitary nature of the work, and numerous other things comprise a long list of objections.

From a financial standpoint, the state of Minnesota is the only state that shows any degree of success. The saving to the farmer, under the most favorable conditions, where but little attention is paid to the cost, is from one and a half to two cents per pound. It would be cheaper for the tax-payers to create a fund to buy twine, than to invest money in a plant which is bound to be run at a loss.

Then the jurist thought of his dwelling grand, with pomp and riches on every hand; of the jaded women who huddled there, and filled with grumblings the perfumed air. They did no work and they sang no songs, but vented him with their social wrongs; and the judge indulged in another sigh, and wiped a tear from his good right eye. In his old horse stumbled and fell down flat, and he took a header and spoiled his hat.

Then the jurist thought of his dwelling grand, with pomp and riches on every hand; of the jaded women who huddled there, and filled with grumblings the perfumed air. They did no work and they sang no songs, but vented him with their social wrongs; and the judge indulged in another sigh, and wiped a tear from his good right eye. In his old horse stumbled and fell down flat, and he took a header and spoiled his hat.

Heart to Heart Talks.

MANANA.

When you urge the Mexican to make a business decision and close up the den he squirms, shows his teeth and says:

"Manana."

Which means tomorrow.

The habit of mind which makes the Mexican say that has made him a poor man, generally speaking, in the midst of the most profusely productive country in the world.

And there are others. Many of us lose out in life because we put off until tomorrow what we should do today. We say:

"Tomorrow I will decide."

"Tomorrow I will begin."

"Tomorrow I will reform."

"Tomorrow I will be happy."

When tomorrow comes we do not decide, we do not begin, we do not reform, we are not happy. Because—

The habit persists. It is fatal to initiative, to resolute action. It becomes easy to say to oneself: Tomorrow I will start the business; tomorrow I will speak the kind word; tomorrow I will cut out the bad habit. We go on thus. We—

"Resolve and re-resolve, then die the same."

Begin now!

When thinking is required, think; when action is required, act; when change is required, reform.

Stick! The iron is real.

Whether it is plowing a field or selling merchandise or launching a boat or courting a girl—

Do it now!

You may make a mistake. But also you may make a mistake tomorrow.

If you make the mistake today there is tomorrow to begin over.

Plunge in! Do not stand shivering on the brink and fear to launch away. The water may be cold, but it will be no warmer tomorrow. Plunge in and have it over.

"Come on in; the water is fine."

I do not need to tell you how many mistakes you have made, how many chances you have missed, by putting things off. You know.

Let the Mexican say "Manana." You will fare much better to say "Today!"

Importance of Manners.

Manners are the happy way of doing things. If they are superficial, so are the deeds, which give such a path to the morning meadow.

TWO ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGES

Fred Siebert, Bartender, and Lydia Dickey, Charged With a Statutory Offense.

Fred Siebert, bartender in a saloon on West Milwaukee street, and Lydia Dickey, appeared before Judge Fildes this morning on charges alleging a statutory offense. Both pleaded not guilty and their trial was set for two o'clock this afternoon. The couple were captured by officers last night in a room which Siebert occupied over the Schmiedel Bros. restaurant on West Milwaukee street. The woman was placed in the woman's cell at the police station over night.

At the trial in the municipal court this afternoon Officers Sam Brown, Slim Dorn, and Chief Appleby appeared for the state and Siebert testified in his own behalf. They were found guilty and were sentenced to pay a fine of $25 apiece and one half the costs, amounting in all to $29.82 each, or to twenty-five days in the county jail. They were committed to the jail until the money is raised.

Three vagrants, Tom Doherty, Tom Doherty, and Henry Doherty, were rounded up by the police this morning and brought into court on charges of vagrancy. Phone messages to the effect that the trio were attempting to "panhandle" persons for ten cents were received at the police station and after they had evaded capture a few times, they were finally taken in charge. They pleaded not guilty and their trial was also set for two o'clock.

At the hearing this afternoon the cases of Dixon and Doherty were dismissed for want of sufficient evidence, and on motion of the state Doherty's case was adjourned until eleven o'clock Monday to accommodate witnesses for the state.

Thrifty folks can exercise economy to the fullest tomorrow.

WILL INTRODUCE MANY NEW BILLS

After Four Days' Vacation Legislature Will Convene For "Real" Session Next Tuesday.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 13.—Although the members of the legislature nominally will have four days' vacation, during which most of them will spend some of their newly-drawn mileage and go to their homes, much will be accomplished here in the interim in the way of preparing for the "real" opening of the session next Tuesday. The legislative reference department is working hard getting out bills for members, and a big batch of measures will mark the resumption of sessions.

The senate will meet in the old supreme court room instead of the re-modeled judges' chambers which had been fitted up at considerable expense, late yesterday afternoon, after Secretary Lew P. Porter of the capital commission had measured here and there with a six-foot rule, it was found that the thirty-three desks, clerks' tables and presiding officer's rest room could be just squeezed into the space. This room had been provided with forced ventilation, while it was used by the supreme court, and this machinery will again be used. The other room for two days by the senators did not possess this feature. The objections to these quarters at first had been so strong that even Library hall at the University, nearly a mile away, had been talked of quite seriously.

The assembly will resume next Tuesday with the ominous cloud of an embarrassing "committee on committees" fight resting over the chamber, although this may be dispelled during the recess. However, according to present plans, Speaker Ingram intends to take the floor immediately after the announcement of his committee assignments, and offer to make changes wherever possible. If this plan fails, the republicans may give in rather than go on record against an "insurgent" principle, and the democratic majority will be in the unique position of having carried its point with hardly a struggle. It is said that many of the republican members are not averse to the method of proposed by the democrats, as this contemplated placing a republican at the head of each committee and there is reason to believe that it would not be difficult to make up a list of committees that would be eminently satisfactory all around. The only real objection that has been offered is that this arrangement might interfere with plans to head certain committees with persons who possess special qualities and fitness.

When She Will Be Man's Equal.

Mystery of the Violets

There are three daughters in the Jerviss family, all attractive young women of a going-out age.

Emily, the eldest, is a tall, dashing brunette. Eleanor, the second, is petite and dark. Daisy, the debutante, is a short, blond, young person with freckles and the engaging manners of a cherubic small boy. It is a standing grievance among this otherwise care-free trio that their various admirers often fail to attach a distinguishing first name to their offerings and notes.

"It was all very well," Daisy sputtered wrathfully to a girl caller, "to contend that Emily is the only Miss Jerviss. To be sure, Emily could, properly and technically speaking, claim the honor of that title, but when it comes to claiming every box of candy that reaches the house thus addressed it is quite another matter."

"It's horribly embarrassing," she complained, "for us not to know which one of us has to thank the man whose card accompanies the gift, because we all three go out with the same men occasionally, and it's hard to know which one she desires to favor."

"This time," she added, with a giggle, "is the worst yet!" She uncovered a square purple box and displayed to her girl caller a great bunch of violets. She buried her nose in them ecstatically.

"They are absolutely the first of the season," she said, "and they came two hours ago addressed to Miss Jerviss and without a trace of a card. Of course, we all three claim them, because Eleanor is going to the theater with Billy Seltsman tonight and Emily is going to a little informal dance with Henry Corsairs and I myself am expecting Livingston Orr to call. A mere call doesn't necessitate flowers, naturally, but Livingston has been rather—er—devoted of late. And every man harbors the conviction that the recipient of his favors is going to know whom to thank by some subtle romantic instinct."

"No, indeed," she went on, in answer to a question from the caller, "we haven't come to any decision yet. We had a council and after much discussion we decided to be foxes, so each one of us invented good excuses to call up the man she is going out with this evening to see if he wouldn't get into a conversation and give himself away."

"Emily called Henry to say that she couldn't possibly be ready until half an hour later than the time he was to come, but he only thanked her gratefully for letting him know, and she had to hang up the receiver without enlightenment."

"Then Eleanor called up Billy to remind him that she didn't know what play they were going to see. She told him that she wanted to look up the criticisms beforehand. Equally hopeless!"

"And so I rang up Livingston to ask him to stop off on his way here tonight and bring me a certain book from the 'Kays'. He agreed pleasantly and remarked that he had been thinking about me all day."

"Ah ha!" said I to myself. "Here is where little Daisy corners the violet market." Then, "How am I going to be convinced of that?" I inquired archly of Livingston, thinking he would speak of his floral offering as a proof. But he only remonstrated, in a hurt voice, that he hoped I wouldn't need any convincing argument on that score. No, I hung up the receiver baffled. What he said didn't sound promising, although, of course, he may have sent the violets and will not mention them until I do."

She returned the bouquet to its box with a sigh. "Emily will probably get them after all," she said, ruefully, "because she has the legal claim. Then if they really did come from Nell's young man or mine he will be mortally offended when he notices that we haven't worn them."

"But, you see—" She was interrupted by the entrance of the housemaid with a card.

"There's a boy just come, Miss Daisy," said the maid, "to say that the box from the florist's that was delivered this afternoon was addressed wrong. He says it was for Mrs. Jerviss instead of Miss Jerviss, and here's the card that was to go with it."

Daisy accepted the card with a blank face. But as she read a broad grin grew upon her countenance.

"They are from Uncle Jack," she said. "He always sends mother flowers when he passes through town."

The grin developed into a laugh. "The joke is on Emily," gasped Daisy after an interval, "for she has gone five miles to the dressmaker's to hurry up her new lavender gown so that she can wear it with those violets tonight!"

Preserving Autumn Leaves. A lady writes that she has preserved autumn leaves in the following manner: Take a book with rather a heavy cover when you go to gather the leaves and place them in it smoothly. The next day or so give them a coat of varnish such as is used for photographs. I have made very pretty centerpieces by cutting a piece of cardboard any shape desired and arranging the leaves as a lace or embroidered centerpiece. For a pretty dish for the middle I cut out carrots about an inch and a half in length and put them in a pretty glass dish with a little water and a few pieces of charcoal. They grow and look like ferns.

Secretive British Diplomacy.
The secrecy of diplomacy is carried to much greater lengths in England than in most European countries. Not only are statements in parliament fewer, but they are much less frank than they are in Germany or in France.—Manchester Guardian.

The Horse for Him!

PANIC AT THEATER FIRE

Explosion of Moving Picture Film Imperils 200.

Women and Children Almost Crushed In Mad Rush to Reach Street After Explosion Occurs.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Two hundred persons—more than half of them women and children—fled panic-stricken from the Annex theater, 5152 South Halsted street, after the explosion of a moving picture film. Employees who tried to quiet the crowd were brushed aside in the mad rush for the street.

Women and children narrowly escaped being thrown from their feet in the mad rush for safety. All escaped without injury, although the women suffered from the shock.

The explosion started a fire in the operators' room and Art Lacey, chief of the Eleventh battalion, responded with members of truck company No. 18, and the fire, which was confined to the picture machine room was extinguished.

OHIO SOCIETY BANQUET

Many Prominent Persons to Attend Annual Dinner in New York.

New York, Jan. 13.—W. S. Hawk, one of the proprietors of the Manhattan, who is the president of the Ohio Society, expects an unusually large gathering at the annual banquet of that organization on Saturday night at the Waldorf.

Gov. Harmon, of Ohio, was expected, but cannot come. He will be represented by O. P. Hughes, chairman of the Ohio railroad commission. Vice President Sherman has accepted an invitation, and ex-Gov. Herrick will attend. There will be about half a dozen railroad presidents who originated in the Buckeye state or have had some association with it. Gov. Dix will attend the reception before going to the dinner that is being given him at the Lotus club.

An Inherited Fading.
A native of Annapolis, Indochina, sentenced in Paris for theft, wrote the following apology to his employer: "All Annapolites, whether emperors, mandarins, secretaries, literary men and others, are born thieves. It is a grave and deadly complaint, and there is no cure for it. I know people do not like thieves in France, but it cannot be helped."

The Rat as a Fighter.
Rats have been known to kill and eat babies, and as they are not afraid to attack full-grown men they would probably make short work of dogs and cats when their numbers were as great as they were in Hamelin. For its size the rat is one of the fiercest of animals and it multiplies so rapidly that it is no wonder it got the better of the poor people of that town.

Valuable for Its Fur.
The chinchilla is found in the department of Oruro and is much sought after on account of the value of its fur. The Bolivian chinchilla is larger and more valuable than the Chilean variety. It is easily crossed with the vicuña, but the fur is then of much less value.

Hit Him in the Wrong Place.
A pneumatic barber chair exploded in Los Angeles and put out a barber's eye. That isn't the device that is needed. What the world requires is a chair that will explode and land on the barber's conversation department.

Strength of Ice.

It is said that ice one and a half inches will support a man; four inches thick will support a cavalry; five inches thick will support an 84-pound cannon; ten inches thick will support a multi-tude, and 18 inches thick will support a railroad train. These figures, of course, presupposes that the ice is of an even thickness, not having thin places, and only to true ice, not slush ice or to ice when the temperature is above the freezing point. After a thaw sets in but little confidence can be placed on the strength of the ice.

To Polish Old Furniture.

For furniture there is nothing to equal olive oil or raw linseed oil, rubbed into the wood, according to the grain. The woodwork may require retainting as well. Ordinary old oak is always improved by rubbing it with warm beer. It should be remembered that linseed oil has the effect of darkening mahogany.

Were Cured of Their Faith.

Towne—Do I understand you to say that Spender's case was really a faith cure?
Browne—Yes. You see, the doctor and the druggist both trusted him.

Don't Tell Everything.

Do not tell everything, even to a friend. When you undertake great affairs, confide in but few. Never love a man; you will not rescue you from calamity nor share what he has with you. To do good to the base is like sowing the sea. The mean are never satisfied; one slip cancels all former benefits. Comrades in feasting are plenty; not in serious matters.—Theognis.

Quite a Difference.

Johnnie—"Say, dad, how do you pronounce explorer Knud Rasmussen's first name—with a short 'u' or a long one?"

Dad (who doesn't know)—Aw, what difference does it make?
Johnnie—"Well, I guess it makes a big difference whether a man is nud or nude up there in the arctic regions!"

Quite a Difference.

The chinchilla is found in the department of Oruro and is much sought after on account of the value of its fur. The Bolivian chinchilla is larger and more valuable than the Chilean variety. It is easily crossed with the vicuña, but the fur is then of much less value.

Long-Lived Germs.

Living typhoid germs have been found in a fly stomach six days after the fly had sucked them in, and these germs were in their "specks" for two days after germs were eaten by Miss Fly. Consumption germs were taken out of the belly of a fly at a fly post-mortem. Mrs. Fly had sucked these particular consumption germs in fifteen days before. Diphtheria germs live in flies a week, but cholera germs die out in a couple of days.

Art and Labor.

Art, properly so-called, is no recreation; it cannot be learned at spare moments, nor pursued when you have nothing better to do. It is no handiwork for drawing-room tables, no relief of the ennui of boredom; it must be understood and taken seriously or not at all. To advance it, men's lives must be given, and, to receive it, their hearts.—John Ruskin.

Looking Backward.

"Are Boston children usually precocious?" "I have known of one who was only three years old who could get into a ruminant's vein."

A Wonderful Spice.

Wonderful things the little brown cloves, for it makes two breaths grow where was only one breath before.

Blood That Maketh an Atonement for the Soul

By PASTOR RUSSELL
of Brooklyn Tabernacle

TEXT—The life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls; for it is the blood that maketh an atonement.—Leviticus XVII, 2.

There is a day in which, more than ever before, the statement of our text is disputed—disbelieved—by Jews, Gentiles and Christians. The great Christian author, St. Paul, agrees exactly with the words of Moses in our text, saying: "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins" (Hebrews 9:22). The orthodox Jew and the orthodox Christian, therefore, are in substantial agreement as to the foundation of things and the unorthodox are in agreement of opposition. The latter agree that there is no necessity for sin atonement—that the later thought of all the wise men of the earth, the greater ministers and rabbis, is that there is no such thing as original sin; hence could be no such thing as necessity for cancelling it—of making an atonement or satisfaction to justice on behalf of it.

All the worldly wise of Christendom have reached the point of repudiating the testimony of the Old Testament and the New respecting the need of a sacrificial death for the satisfaction of divine justice, the cancellation of sin and the restitution of the sinner to divine favor. The claim of the so-called new theologians repudiates the fall, repudiates the ransom and repudiates a restitution to all that was lost—claiming that nothing was lost and all that we have is gain. Thus the world and its wisdom know not God and appreciate not his arrangement that, as death came upon mankind through the sin of one man (Adam), even so a restitution to life should come to all men through Christ—that "as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive."

These worldly wise cannot deny the fact that there is sin in the world and that there is death in the world and that the tendency of all sin is toward death. They cannot deny that death is gaining a greater hold than ever before upon our race. Insane asylums, prisons and reform schools show that, notwithstanding our educational facilities and wonderful achievements under the enlightening influences of the new dispensation now dawning—nevertheless, the insanity statistics and the prison statistics and the physical statistics show that, in spite of everything, our race is becoming mentally, morally and physically weaker day by day. It is for them to explain how these facts fit to their theory of evolution.

By the term Christian we refer to those who intelligently believe the explanation of the Bible respecting sin, that it is a violation of the divine law and carries with it the penalty that Father Adam was created as sinless as are the angels and as perfect as they, only on a little lower plane of being. Obedience was required of him as the price of divine favor and everlasting life. Disobedience thrust him from paradise into the unprepared earth to wrestle with the thorns and thistles, where the decree, "Dying thou shalt die," accomplished his execution. His race was in his loins and naturally shared by heredity his weaknesses and death penalty, so that the entire race is a dying race. But the Creator was unwilling that Adam and his children should die as brutes. God did not revoke his decree of death nor give any intimation that he had done unjustly in condemning his creature. He did, however, provide a way for their relief. He provided that, as the first man alone had sinned actually, so one Redeemer alone would be necessary for the race. And to him he offered a great reward, so that his sacrifice for sin would work out to his own advantage, as well as to the sinner's. A part of the reward was the high exaltation to the heavenly nature—far above angels, and the gift of the kingdom of earth necessary for the overruling and subduing of the spirit of rebellion in the world and for the exaltation and uplifting from sin and death conditions of all the willing and obedient of Adam's entire race.

But why should God require the death of a victim as a basis for the forgiveness of the sins of Adam and his race? We reply that God's law was intended to be an illustration of the exactness of divine justice. Justice could not punish Adam nor his children with everlasting torture or any other of the horrible things we once imagined. The severest penalty of the divine law is represented in our common law, which, as an extreme penalty, requires the death of the transgressor.

After the divine reconciliation comes human reconciliation. The great Messiah will not require sacrifices of humanity, but, on the contrary, will open the blind eyes and cause the knowledge of the grace of God to reach Adam and every member of his race. Then all, willing for reconciliation, will be helped by the great Mediator of the New Covenant and by Israel, his chosen people and earthly representatives. The object to be accomplished during Messiah's reign is the bringing to all the willing and obedient the restitution which God has promised—restitution to all that was lost. Ultimately Messiah will transfer the allegiance of the whole world (performed by him) to Jehovah God, that he may be all in all (I. Corinthians 15:28).

TO PROMOTE SAFETY

WESTERN RAILROAD AIMS TO TRAIN EMPLOYEES.

New Kind of Campaign That Has for Its Object the Elimination of Accidents Wherever It Is Possible.

The management of a great western railroad has entered on a campaign for the reduction of accidents, which is being carried on by methods that probably are unique. A large majority of railroad accidents are due to the carelessness or recklessness of employees; most of them would be avoided if employees would give reasonably strict obedience to orders and rules.

For the purpose of the campaign the employees and officers are being organized from the lowest rank in the operating department to the highest. On every division there has been formed a committee of safety, each being composed of an engineer, a conductor, a fireman, a brakeman, a trackman and a switchman, who are appointed by the superintendent. Similar committees have been formed in the various division shops, being appointed by the master mechanics. In the Chicago shops the committee is appointed by the superintendent of shops and the superintendent of motive power and machinery. These committees in the mechanical department consist of one man from each shop. There has also been appointed a committee on safety for the large yards in Chicago, composed of switchmen, who are appointed by the superintendent of freight terminals.

The personnel of these committees is changed constantly, one man on each committee retiring and a successor to him being appointed each month. Their duty, according to the Railway Age Gazette, is to investigate the causes of accidents, to seek to get their fellow employees to do all they can to remove them, and, when any action needs to be taken by employees, to recommend it to their superior officers. The purpose of the frequent changes of personnel is to familiarize with and interest in the subject of accidents, their causes and remedies, as many men as possible, and thereby to create among employees as much of the right kind of sentiment as possible. The committees meet monthly. A central committee to receive the reports and supervise the work of the committees of safety has been appointed. Matters requiring action which exceeds the authority of this committee will be referred to the general managers.

Cuban Railroad Enterprise.
President Gomez of Cuba has contracted with the Ferrocarril de Fernandez y Ponce del Sur, a corporation organized for constructing a 40-mile railroad, connecting the two places indicated in the company's title, and has leased it to the old Trinidad railroad, which runs from Caidon, on the south coast, through Trinidad to Fernandez. The railroad company is to begin work on the new line and the reconstruction of the old by December 24, and it is expected that the whole line will be in working order about 18 months later. Trinidad will thus be placed in direct railroad communication with the rest of the island, being the last urban center of any importance to be so connected. The new corporation will enjoy the benefits of the law of July 5, 1890, in regard to subvention.

Another proposition which has been made by the Cuban railroad (Mr. William Van Horn) to take over the old line and carry it on to Sancti Spiritus, on the main line, prejudicial to the interests of the other terminal cities. The Ferrocarril de Fernandez y Ponce del Sur is said to be backed by French capital to the extent of $2,000,000.

China's Railroad School.
An indication of the interest taken by the central government in the future of railways in China is afforded by the establishment last year, in connection with the ministry of communications at Peking, of a school for training railway officials.

The school is built for 600 students, but the number is at present limited to 350, who come from all parts of the empire and vary in age from eighteen to twenty-five. There are about 30 teachers, including one British, one American (a drill sergeant), two French and two German. Most of the teachers are Chinese students returned from abroad and they are well paid.

The curriculum includes the Chinese language, drill, geography, history of Chinese railways, mathematics, drawing, chemistry, physics, traffic management, railway bookkeeping, elements of engineering, steam and electrical, workshop administration and railway company law.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Little Bed-Time Tales By EDITH HAVENS

The Morning Star

THE long quiet night was beginning to break into a new day. A line of light appeared over the eastern hills, chasing the shadows away from the treetops. The little morning star, asleep behind the great eastern mountain, suddenly awoke. He rubbed his eyes, then said, "It is time for me to get up."

Then quietly he poked his beautiful face up over the mountain top and took a peep at the great world. Then he floated up into the sky in all his brilliance. Away down below him, behind the hills, he saw the sun already astir, and for a moment he felt sad, for only was he allowed to stay in the sky but a scant half hour. When the great sun popped into view it was time for him to go.

"The sun says I am a beautiful star," he said to himself. "Then if I am so beautiful why is it that I am allowed to stay awake in the sky for such a very short time?" The little star's eyes filled with tears. It was a beautiful calm morning. The air was soft and the little star, as he looked down on a quiet world, saw a flock of birds suddenly dart out from among the trees and fly towards the west. Then from hundreds of chimneys he saw tiny trails of smoke rise up to greet him. The trees began to rock back and forth in the morning breeze, then some people began to appear on the roadway far below him. Sometimes he wondered little morning star felt sad?

But listen, you little folks, for I am going to tell you of the Here-therere-and-everywhere Fairy who travels about everywhere, in the sea, the sky, and about the earth, and I am going to tell you how this little fairy made the little morning star stop feeling sad.

Very Much Surprised.

"You look surprised, Mrs. Mangle; what's the matter?" "Why, my son Tom came in just now full of an avian meet he had seen. He told me some news of the flights in the air that were absolutely incredible, and so surprised me as to leave me almost in a state of prostration."

What a Grand Thing Memory Is

In ancient times the Egyptians erected great pyramids to the memories of their departed kings. Today those same pyramids stand as wonders to the civilized world, preserving still the memories of the ancient kings.

In modern times, great works of art, in granite and other stone, and works more simple in design, are erected to preserve the memory of those gone beyond—and these marks of affection will remain for ages.

In the spring of the year the placing of Monuments is most frequent and it is advisable to place orders now for work of this nature, so that it will be ready for spring setting.

STANDARD OIL CASE IS ARGUED

Attorney Milburn Opens for the Trust in U. S. Court.

LAUDS OIL KING AS BENEFACITOR

Frank B. Kellogg, United States Trust Buster, Will Present Government's Side of Case in Asking for Dissolution of Combine.

Washington, Jan. 13.—The Standard Oil company was pictured before the supreme court of the United States as a great beneficiary enterprise. The man who is conceded to have been most prominent in developing the gigantic corporation, was denominated a business genius to be compared with the stars that shine in the world of art and literature.

For more than three hours John G. Milburn, of Buffalo, attorney for the Standard Oil company, defended the corporation and John D. Rockefeller against the charge of having conspired to restrain trade in contravention of the Sherman anti-trust law. It was the opening argument in the second of the big anti-trust cases now before the supreme court, the American Tobacco company case having been closed.

Mr. Milburn's voice trembled when he recited the great sacrifices made by his client to save the production of oil in the Pennsylvania field in the 70's when, at great expense, upon borrowed capital, and a credit strained almost to the breaking point, the Standard extended its pipe line holdings and increased its storage facilities to an enormous extent to insure the oil production and prevent waste and save producers losing money.

The growth and development of the Standard Oil business had come about through the creation of new business by the Standard, rather than through acquisition, according to the attorney. He traced the Standard company from the Appalachian field to the West Virginia field to the Ohio-Indiana fields and thence to Texas, Oklahoma, California, Southern Illinois and Louisiana. Wherever his client had gone, following the course of oil development, it had been with the beneficent purpose of taking care of the production, supplying the capital and the pipe line facilities and making gallons of oil flow into channels of commerce where one had dribbled before.

Mr. Milburn expressed much anxiety for the 10,000 shareholders, many of them people of moderate circumstances, if the decree of the lower court stands. He explained that there are outstanding 1,000,000 shares in the New Jersey corporation which the government had attacked successfully in the lower court as a combination in restraint of trade; that the 1,000,000 have a par value of $100,000,000 and an actual value of $300,000,000. If a dissolution were ordered, each shareholder would receive a proportionate lot of stock in the twenty corporations that are now controlled by the Standard Oil company of New Jersey. Each holder of a share of Standard Oil of New Jersey would get one dollar as his distributive share of the Standard Oil of Indiana and 20 cents as his distributive share of the Chesapeake Manufacturing company. He suggested that the probability would be that the small holders would get a "mass of scrip," worthless compared with their holdings of shares in the New Jersey corporation.

Frank B. Kellogg will reargue the case for the government today. He will be followed by C. L. Watson for the Standard Oil company, who will be followed by Attorney General Wickersham.

GIRL SHOTS STUDENT

Alice Poehler Fires Shot Into Body of Carl Storey.

Later Shoots Herself and Leaves Note Stating She Had Been Deceived by Her Victim.

Indianapolis, Jan. 13.—Carl V. Storey, a student at the University of Illinois, whose home is in Columbus, this state, was shot and fatally wounded in the Bradley hotel by Alice Poehler, formerly of Guthrie, Ind. The girl fired one shot into Storey's body, the bullet entering near the heart and striking the heart. She then turned the pistol on herself, sending a bullet into her body near the heart.

Storey and the girl reached the hotel about noon and were shown to a room. What transpired between them is not known, but two pistol shots were heard in the room and when persons entered both were lying on the floor desperately wounded but conscious. The girl refused to make any statement at the hospital.

That the crime was meditated was shown by a letter found in the room in which Miss Poehler had written to her relatives that when they received it she would be dead. She also said that she intended to kill Storey because he had deceived her.

EDDY BEQUEST HELD ILLEGAL

Question Hinges on Jurisdiction Between Two States.

SONS MAY SECURE RICHES

Senator Chandler Holds as Counsel for Mrs. Eddy's Sons Church Cannot Inherit Legacy Under New Hampshire Law.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 13.—DeWitt C. Howe, of counsel for George W. Glover, has filed with the clerk of the superior court a petition in equity, setting forth the claim that Mrs. Eddy's will was illegal, and praying for a construction thereof and also asking that Henry M. Baker be enjoined from paying out any money on account of the estate until legal questions are settled and also enjoining Josiah E. Fernald, resident trustee of the Eddy property from allowing any of the $2,000,000 of property which he has in his possession from being taken beyond the jurisdiction of the state.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 13.—Opinions by two eminent jurists, Hamble Taylor and William L. Chambers, that the bequest of the late Mary Baker G. Eddy of $2,000,000 to the First Church, Scientist, of Boston, is forbidden by the laws of both Massachusetts and New Hampshire are given in documents handed out here and signed by these two, as well as by the original counsel for George W. Glover and Dr. E. J. Foster Eddy, Messrs. William E. Chandler, John W. Kelley and DeWitt C. Howe.

William E. Chandler, leading counsel for the "Next friends" in the famous suit for an accounting of the property of Mrs. Eddy, wrote on Dec. 24 to Messrs. Taylor and Chambers. He called attention to the fact that Mrs. Eddy's will was proved in common form before the probate court in this city Dec. 14. Senator Chandler's letter continues in part:

"The executor states that the estate of the deceased consists, as nearly as can be ascertained, of property of the following value: Real estate, $20,000; personal estate, including copyrights, estimated, $2,000,000. The whole not exceeding $2,020,000."

"These facts present to me, as counsel for Mrs. Eddy's two sons, Mr. George Glover and Dr. E. J. Foster Eddy, a most important question. Mrs. Eddy bequeathed the whole residue of her estate to the First Church of Christian Science in Boston. She was a resident of New Hampshire, her personal estate is all there in the hands of Mr. Fernald, one of her three trustees or agents, and her executor lives in that state. If the bequest to the church is valid, it will receive about $2,000,000. Will you draft an opinion on the question, whether or not the church can take the legacy under the New Hampshire law prohibiting such a bequest to a church of over $5,000 annually. (N. H. Pub. Stats. of 1901, ch. 152, section 10, page 484) which opinion we can sign and submit to Messrs. Glover and Foster Eddy. If the church cannot receive it, I conclude that the property will go to the two sons."

Senator Chandler then reviews events which led up to the "Next friends" proceeding which was instituted March 11, 1907, and traces the property disclosures which resulted from the suit. He refers to several conferences between the attorneys for Mrs. Eddy and her son and to an agreement reached between the parties which was satisfactory, but which Mrs. Eddy in December, 1907, refused to sign. In the early part of 1909, he says that substantially the same agreement as that of 1907 was signed by him for George W. Glover and Dr. E. J. Foster. Mr. Chandler continues: "Mr. Streator drew the agreement for my signature. When signing I took it for granted that Mrs. Eddy would not, in giving away her property, undertake to violate public law. If I had thought that she had already done so by attempting to create a church with an endowment of $2,000,000 I should not have signed."

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

HERE'S a suggestion for the young person who is apt to be impatient when father or mother doesn't readily understand something, and who, instead of gently explaining things as she would to her girl friends, snaps them up with "I've told you that four times already!" or something like that.

The little "stonegrasper" lady contributed the suggestion. She says she has been a victim of the habit, but isn't ever going to be again. Personally, I believe who never really was.

"It all came over me in a flash the other night," she says. "It was just before Christmas. I'd been up until one o'clock the night before, working my head off to finish something that had to go away. I'd skipped my lunch to do some final shopping. I'd had a terribly long, hard day at the office and I came home that night, so dead tired that my head felt all confused and queer.

"Well, after supper, mother was doing up presents for me and I was trying to write one or two Christmas cards. Every now and then, she'd ask me who was to have the lace jabot or if I'd written the card to go with Aunt Eliza's sofa pillow and I was that tired that each time it actually took me two or three minutes to get it through my head what she wanted.

"And all at once it came over me that that was the way of it. Don't you see? They've had a long day of it and it's toward evening, and they're rather tired, and they just can't think as quickly as they could when it was morning.

"Why when I thought of it that way, I just couldn't see how I ever got short and impatient even when father asked me something four times in one evening or when mother insisted on getting the girls' names all mixed up. It just seemed incredible that I could ever have been anything but patient."

If we stopped to think much about them, most of the unkind things we all do would seem really incredible to us, wouldn't they?

It's all because we don't stop to consider, to put ourselves in their place, "to think."

Of course that's a shade better than intentional unkindness, but—well let's recall a favorite verse of mine, whose meaning, if heeded, I believe would reduce the unkindness in the world by about half.

"Much evil is wrought by want of thought
As well as by want of heart."

Pudding Sauces.

A list of pudding sauces is not always available. Here are a few that will be found easy to prepare and not expensive.

Golden Sauce.—Rub one-half cup of butter to a cream, add a half cup of light brown sugar and beat until light and creamy. Beat the yolks of two eggs, and when ready to serve put the bowl or pan containing the sugar over boiling water and stir until it is a liquid, then add the eggs, one-eighth teaspoon of mace, one-half cup of fruit juice, and stir until it thickens. Serve at once and stir before each pouring.

Fruit Sauce.—Blend one-half cup of butter and a cup of sugar, gradually work in one-half cup of jelly.

Hard Sauce.—Four one-tablespoonful of boiling water over one-half cup of butter, stir until creamy, mix in one cup of granulated sugar. Flavor with nutmeg or lemon extract or mace. Serve on orange or lemon cups, or keep in a small dish.

Orange Sauce.—Grate the rind of one orange, and squeeze the juice over it. In a saucepan mix one cup of sugar with a fourth of a cup of flour or half as much cornstarch. Pour in a pint of boiling water and cook ten minutes. This sauce will keep several days.

The yolk of an egg may be added to the sauce just before straining and the stiff white added after. Lemon or other fruits may be used to take the place of part of the liquid.

Molasses Sauce.—Scald a cup of molasses with an ounce of butter and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Serve hot with apple dumplings.

Rate, Object to Gasoline.

Rates appear to have a strong objection to gasoline. Not long ago a visitor, exploring the London sewers was told, by his guide as they walked under Long Act and Bobo that the sewer was in this neighborhood are almost entirely free from rats. This immunity has been noticed only since the development of the motor-car industry and the establishment of its headquarters in Shaftesbury Avenue and Long Act.

A large quantity of gasoline thus finds its way down the drain, and this, in the opinion of the sewer men, effectually keeps the rats away.

Superstitious Mothers.

In the far north-Asian cradles are commonly used. As a rule these are very crude and often unsightly in construction. They are very rare, even in great museums and ethnologic collections, because of the superstitions and prejudices of the mothers. Among the Tlinkits of Alaska, no matter how large the family may be, the same cradle is never used for more than one child.

RECENT DISASTERS.

The explosion in the Grand Central station in New York and the fires in Philadelphia and Chicago have taken heavy toll of human life and caused widespread sorrow just at Christmas time. But there is always a scientific side of such happenings.

In the New York calamity a train of empty cars being backed into the station got beyond control, ran into and broke off the bumper at the end of the track, crushed into a lumber pile, which in turn broke open a gas pipe, allowing the gas to escape.

The gas is brought in steel cars from Mott Haven and kept in steel tanks under compression of from 125 to 150 pounds, which drives it quickly into cars when the connection is made.

Even more rapidly the gas was driven out into the open air, whose pressure is hardly fifteen pounds. It thus filled the shedlike space, and such is the affinity of oxygen for this gas that it required but a spark to explode it. The spark is thought to have been furnished by a workman dropping a steel tool upon the electrified third rail.

The explosion of this great mass of gas caused an instantaneous expansion of the air, which was felt blocks away. It was noted that windows were broken in from outside pressure, immediately after which there was a suction outward. The latter is to be explained on the theory that the explosion caused a rarefaction of the atmosphere with a swift upward movement, leaving a partial vacuum, which all the surrounding air rushed in to fill.

In Chicago the drunken were gathered, some under and some upon a canopy, upon which suddenly fell the walls of the building. It was at first thought that the walls bulged out and toppled over because of an explosion of escaping ammonia within. But the insurance men deny this, saying that the walls fell because of inside pressure, due to the sudden and intense heating of the air. This is conceivable, provided all the windows and doors were tightly closed.

If doors and windows were fast then the raising of the inclosed air to a high temperature would be like raising steam. It would gain more and more expansive force until some weak point in the wall would give way.

CATARRH GOES

So Does Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Croup and Asthma.

You can easily tell by reading the symptoms below, whether you have catarrh or not.

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing, discharge from the nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, choking in throat, droppings in throat, a cough, pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, spasms of coughing, low spirited at times, raising of mucus, difficulty in breathing, loss of vital force.

The People's Drug Co. has a wonderful remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called HYOMER (pronounced High-mer), which is a vaporized air, no antiseptic, that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life, gives relief in two minutes, and cures catarrh.

The price, including hard rubber pocket inhaler, is only $1.00. The inhaler will last a lifetime, so that should you need a second bottle of HYOMER, you can get it for 50 cents.

Other Tolstoy.

William Penn labored in much the same direction as Tolstoy. His personality was less striking, his intellectual gifts less powerful, but he had a more practical mind; he founded his society, and he made a mark on the world which is still visible. With a doctrinal message infinitely less attractive, but a still greater capacity for organization and "missionary" work, General Booth has influenced his contemporaries more effectively than either of them, and in some form or other his work may possibly last for some generations.

The poorest of Indian mothers must have a beautiful baby basket or cradle, fashioned by her own careful fingers. Marionette Theater.

One of the features of the theatrical exposition which took place in Munich recently was the marionette theater, of which an American, who attended one of the performances, writes: "The Munich zoo, where the exhibition took place, swarmed with theatrical people, artists and patrons of the stage. Every person found something to interest him, but the puppet theater was the chief attraction for us. We saw two performances—Offenbach's 'Pretty Maid of Killando' and 'King Viola and Princess Clarinette,' by Muhlmann and Scherber. So closely did spoken words harmonize with the acting of the figures and so, exactly did the manipulators of the strings and wires make the action suit the word that one fancied he saw living pygmies on the stage."

CHAPTER XIII.

Captain Fielding's Gospel.

Side by side, upon that great sheep-skin, they sat, those two people, in the very lap of death. A reasonable estimate of their chances would give them, perhaps, a week to live. With exceptional fortune, that week might stretch itself into a month. The great blue spirit of the arctic would darken to purple, and to black. The icy hand of the savage polar winter would get its clutches upon them. They had nothing to resist it with. No stores of ammunition or of food. No clothing, except what they wore. No fuel, save what they could contrive to gather along the tundra before the winter gales would make further search impossible. Neither Jeanne nor Cayley was of a sort to face the prospect of that death with resignation. They were young, intensely alive, and with Jeanne, at least, the last and biggest part of life lay, or had lain until yesterday, in a broad open road before her. But a prospect like the one that lay before them brings its own anesthetic with it. It was so utterly hopeless that it became unreal. The face of the future, into which she had cast just one hurried glance, was so hideous that to the girl, at least, it was like some monstrous mask of carnival—too grotesquely horrible to be taken seriously.

That is partly the reason why she succeeded in surprising Cayley by sitting down to breakfast with him in the same mood and spirit which she had shown before when she did not know.

"I'm about half famished," she said as they began their meal, "at least that duck smells perfectly irresistible. It's done to a turn, I think. In a way, it's rather a joke that we should begin our arctic privations with a roast duck."

"There's something queer about that hut," he said, "something that gets queerer the more I think about it. Why do you suppose the Walrus people abandoned it? Or, rather, do you suppose they did abandon it? They couldn't have built another house without demolishing this one. There are no trees on this land to furnish timber, and there certainly isn't any hardwood where they could have found it. The doors swing on hinges, but those doors swing on hinges last night, and the bolt worked, and more or less, the walls and roof kept out the gale. For this style of architecture it's in pretty good repair."

"The girl was only half convinced. 'That great heap of stones in there,' she began, 'doesn't look like good repair or recent habitation.'"

"No it doesn't," he rejoined. "It's been made to look as little that way as possible. It wouldn't have got into that condition otherwise in 100 years. Come, let's have a look. It's something to hope for, at any rate."

She followed him a little perplexed. "To hope for?" she repeated questioningly.

He had already entered the hut, and did not at once volunteer any further explanation, but from the shine of excitement she could see in his eyes, it was evident that he contemplated something better than merely holding death at arms' length for a little while.

To the girl's eyes there was but little about the interior of the hut to account for such a hope, even though she saw that all of the things he had said about it were true. The flimsy inner doors were still hinged to their frames, and were provided with a miscellaneous assortment of catches. It was marine hardware, all of it, evidently from her father's ship, the Phoenix. The bunks and shelves which lined the walls looked perfectly solid and well built. But the general appearance of the room presented a look of disrepair. It was absolutely unfurnished. The great heap of smoke-blackened stones, of various sizes and shapes, and the hole in the roof above them, attested that they had once been a fire-place.

From the forlorn aspect of the room the girl gladly turned her eyes away and stood looking at Cayley instead. He had been sweeping the walls, roof and floor in a general survey. Now, abruptly, he went over to the heap of stones, picked up one of them, rubbed his thumb over it and scrutinized it with an air of considerable interest, the black snout he left.

"That would account for the drift-wood," he said absently.

At that he might have seen in the girl's face a look of half-amused impatience, but his abstraction was too deep for him to notice it.

He walked over to one of the side walls, pulled open what proved to be a big solid shutter, revealing a glazed window; and, for a long while, stood there, unconscious of the look the girl had turned upon him, unconscious of his present surroundings.

"Yes, something to hope for, certainly," he turned away from the window as he said it, and smiled at her. "A good hope—a good fighting hope—that when the relief comes back next summer they'll find you here alive."

"If you say so, I'll believe it," said the girl, "because you told me the truth before, and do you mind telling me why?"

"I should have thought of it sooner. I should have noticed it last night. My guess was right, that's all. This is not an abandoned hut. Don't you see, it's in almost perfect repair? The hinges on this shutter work, at though if you look closely you can see that some one gave a tug at them not long ago in an attempt to pull them out. And that patch on the wall was put on within a month. The men who wrecked this place worked hastily and showed no great degree of imagination. They didn't much time, you see, because they couldn't have begun until they caught their first glimpse of the yacht. They had finished the job before they could send a party ashore."

"But why in the world should they do such a thing?" the girl protested. "He shook his head. 'I haven't worked that out yet, not fully, at any rate. After all, it's not the question that concerns us.'"

"I'm still in a maze about it. What did you mean about the drift wood?" "Why, the sort on these stones showed me that. They haven't been burning drift wood in this fire-place. They've been burning coal—or oil, perhaps. I didn't think of that. That's why the drift wood collected again out there on the tundra. You remember your father speaks of having used it all? There have been a dozen men living here over since, and they didn't need it. So they must have had some other sort of fuel."

"No, not only a supply of fuel, but of food, too. You remember your father also speaks of having his larder completely stocked for the winter at this time? Well, these fellows weren't expecting any relief. They must have stocked their larder, too. Of course," he went on a moment later, "I realized vaguely all along that there must be stores somewhere here on the land because men were living here, but on the theory that they had abandoned the bench and were living in some undiscovered part of the mainland, our chance of finding those stores was almost nothing at all."

"Then he got his breath. 'You're safe!' he questioned instantly. 'You were in danger, sudden danger, and in terror at it. That was what frightened me, that sudden knowledge, I came down, fearing I should be too late.'"

"I had a fright," she admitted; "but I don't see how you could know. I'm very sure I didn't cry out."

"No, I heard nothing, no sound at all. 'I just knew, and so I came to you as fast as I could. What was it that frightened you?'"

"Nothing at all, I imagine. I was sitting here on the ledge, looking at that wonderful sky, and all at once I found I was growing afraid. I didn't know what it was about, at all. I suppose it was just because I was a little tired and had begun to realize that I was a long way from home. I had come around the headland, but really to look for more firewood, but in the hope that I might happen to find a clue to where the stores are hidden; and, as I said, suddenly it seemed a long way back and I began to find myself afraid. (And then, being afraid, I—well, I thought I saw something moving up there behind the rocks—something big, bigger than a man, and whitish-yellow."

His eyes followed the direction in which she had pointed, but could make out nothing in the deep, vibrant blue shadows.

"That's likely enough," he told her, "it was probably a bear. If it was, we're in luck. I'll come back by and by and go gunning for him. But first, I'm going to take you home."

She had used the word before, but in what sense he was not entirely sure; and she had undoubtedly used it not more than half consciously. At any rate, when he said it now she flushed a little, and so did he, and their eyes, meeting, brightened suddenly.

Find them would be like trying to find Point Barrow in a fog. But you see, if they kept them here in these huts, and then hid them when they caught sight of the yacht, while they may be well hidden, they can't be far away. There wouldn't have been time to move them far; certainly not over the glacier and into the interior there. It must all be hidden somewhere, here on the coast. When we find that hiding place, we shall probably find all the stores we need for the winter."

"Then, I suppose, the next thing for us to do is to go out and find it."

"Not quite the next thing. Unless we have exceptional luck, we can hardly hope to find it for several days; it may take a fortnight, and we must have some temporary security first. In the meantime there is no telling what sort of weather we will have. It's rather late for these beautiful, mild days, I fancy. No, the first thing to do is to rebuild this fire-place and bring in a lot of drift wood and all those birds that were killed last night by flying against the cliff. When we have made this hut habitable against a spell of 40 below zero weather, such as we're likely to have at any time, and have accumulated stores of fuel and food for a few days, then we'll begin our search. I had better get to work at once. I think I can rebuild this fire-place by myself. Will you go and begin carrying in firewood, and as many of those ducks and geese and loons as you can find there along the tundra?"

She nodded, and turned to leave the hut. "Take the revolver with you," he called after her.

At that she halted abruptly in the doorway. "Why should I have it any more than you?" Then, answering his smile with one of her own, she added: "I suppose a well-trained crew doesn't demand reasons for the captain's orders—only—"

"There's a perfectly good reason. I'm working in the shelter, and you in the open. Besides that, I'm stronger and I have my sheath knife. If I were attacked by anything, I could give a better account of myself than you could. You'd better take bolt and holster and all, and buckle it right around your waist."

When Philip finally had his fire-place rebuilt, in a temporary fashion which he thought would serve till greater leisure should allow him to perfect it, he stepped outside the hut and looked first down and then up the shore in search for her, and was disappointed at finding her nowhere in sight.

She must be dreadfully tired, he thought, and with that thought decided to set out to find her. First, however, he transferred the remnants of the fire from the flat stone before the hut to his newly constructed hearth, heaped on more wood and noted, with satisfaction, that his makeshift chimney drew well and did not smoke intolerably. He had discovered an empty cask under a heap of rubbish in the storeroom and this he filled with chunks of ice and set by the fire to melt.

Five minutes later he was just a whirling, glinting, sun-bathed speck in the amber air, the thrilling, pricking, whistling air. He had taken to his wings, upon leaving the hut, simply because they offered him the quickest, easiest way of finding Jeanne.

Suddenly he was flying downward, as fast as gravity and his great wings would take him. Drenched with the sweat of a sudden terror, cleaving the air so fast that the sound of its whirling rose to a scream through his taut racing. Down he slanted, onward a little, past the end of the great headland. Then, with the sudden exertion of all his strength, upon one lowered wing, the other flashing high like the stroke of a scimitar, in the curve of the shortest possible arc, he shot downward, pounced, checked, and alighted not far from the girl.

She had been seated upon a broken ledge of rock when he had first caught sight of her. She was in act of getting to her feet when he alighted, not a half dozen paces away.

She had been pale, but her color had come back now in a sudden surge. She was breathing unsteadily and her hands were clasped against her breast. "You—you mustn't fly like that," she said. "If you had been an eagle, the way you wheeled and came rushing down out of the sky would have terrified me. I shut my eyes in order not to see you killed."

He did not answer her at once, and she, looking intently into his face, went on. "You know it was dangerous. You thought yourself that you were going to be killed. I can see the horror of it in your eyes."

Then he got his breath. "You're safe!" he questioned instantly. "You were in danger, sudden danger, and in terror at it. That was what frightened me, that sudden knowledge, I came down, fearing I should be too late."

Lay Hold of the Common Good. If men take the presumption of those who claim a reputation to which they have no right, they equally condemn the false-heartedness of those who fall below the glory which is their own. Love, then, the sense of your private sorrows and lay hold of the common good.—Demosthenes.

The Skin and Not the Blood.

Until recently it has been generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by internal remedies. Careful experiments and scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is purely a skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease, having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Press Association set about to compound a prescription that would successfully cope with this disease, and after much investigating brought out Moritol Eczema Remedy. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Moritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. Reliable Drug Co. are commissioned by the association to sell it in Janesville.
